

Twitter (or X) has developed a grand issue with bot/spam accounts negatively impacting user experience with the platform; a surefire method to eliminate this issue must be developed. Bot accounts are automated accounts that often interact with user posts and direct messages, flooding them with nonsensical spam links and posts often used for engagement farming. These bots are also capable of following an uncountable number of user accounts. Users are able to block these bot accounts, however it is futile as more bots will continue to interact along the way anyway.
